Animal's Poop

EVERYONE poops, humans and animals alike.

Poop turns back to soil with the help of bugs, microorganisms and such. If there were no organisms that fed on poop, the world could overflow with it.

Who eats it?

Senchikogane

("Japanese earth-boring dung beetle")

Found between June and October.

Belongs to the same superfamily

(Scarabaeidae) as the overseas

dung beetles, but only rarely does it roll poop.
